Thus, ´Architecture Beach´ is a contemporary building that embraces an idyllic setting with a wonderful and fascinating topography.

Typically employing modern materials like concrete or glass gives a contemporary aesthetic to the residence and continuity to spaces. Also, intrinsic properties of these materials as the strength is offset by the great use of light, which gives clarity and lightness to the whole.

The house has been designed from the dialogue established between nature and structure. Thus, the house, located on a gentle hill, 20 meters from the sea, forms an element, almost sculptural, floating in space with an excellent treatment of the volumes. And the great development plan of the house allows a flexible use of space, which is completely open to the privileged views over the sea.

A cutting-edge interior also complete this holiday villa with some of the most sought-piece design of the twentieth century as the Lucellino apply, the poet of light Ingo Maurer, or some of the most iconic Eames chairs.
